Actor Lived Death Plot

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — (AP) — Actor Brian Kelly never appeared in a segment of "The Untouchables" but he lived a possible episode of the gangland series.

Kelly, star of the successful movie "Flipper," is the son of Harry Kelly, former governor of Michigan and now a justice of the state's supreme court.

"But my father, before all that, as a prosecutor, helped break up Detroit's famous Purple Gang," said Kelly.

"One of the gang escaped from prison, killed the judge who had sent him up and was finally captured near our home with a high-powered rifle trained on our back yard. My brother and sister and I were playing in the yard — but he was waiting only for my father to come out. Fortunately, he didn't."
